

By all means my best hope is that Morse Code will always be required at Some level in amateur radio. I use it daily and would have never learned CW if not required. CW, is an art form and part of our radio history that I hope amateur radio will preserve forever.

It seems to me though that amateurs should be required to to learn CW at general and above. NO-Code Techs Could have the old Novice privileges.
This would give them a chance to practice CW skills on the air without having to pass a test first.
